

Day Code - Chinese Almanac

Inspirations

Is today suitable for moving? In the 1960s to 1980s, on the walls of every family in Taiwan, calendars presented by xx companies or oo stores were hanging there. People tore off one page early in the morning to celebrate the coming of a new day. In addition to telling you the date, you could tell the fortune hours and which zodiac animals signs should be careful during that day, according to the calendar. It includes things that could be achieved smoothly today and which ones I should put aside for some other time. On this little piece of paper, many codes of daily life were hidden there. When we look at the calendar, we always think: what if we transposed the information on the calendar from printed words to icons? The page would look marvelous and unique after transposition and rearrangement. Therefore, the Day Code - Chinese Almanac came into being.

Unique attributes

On the calendar in Taiwan, in addition to providing information regarding the records of ancestors' wisdom – lunar calendar. It also tells people to welcome good fortune and avoid bad omens every day. Nevertheless, the information is provided in verbal form. "Day Code - Chinese Almanac" presents signs transposed from words. It also filtered and deleted some suggestions for incompatibility in the regular lunar calendar and selected reminders suitable for modern people: marriage, business contract, opening a business, moving, etc. to remind them which items are suitable or unsuitable to be done today.

Rat	Ox	Tiger	Rabbit

Dragon	Snake	Horse	Goat

Monkey	Rooster	Dog	Pig

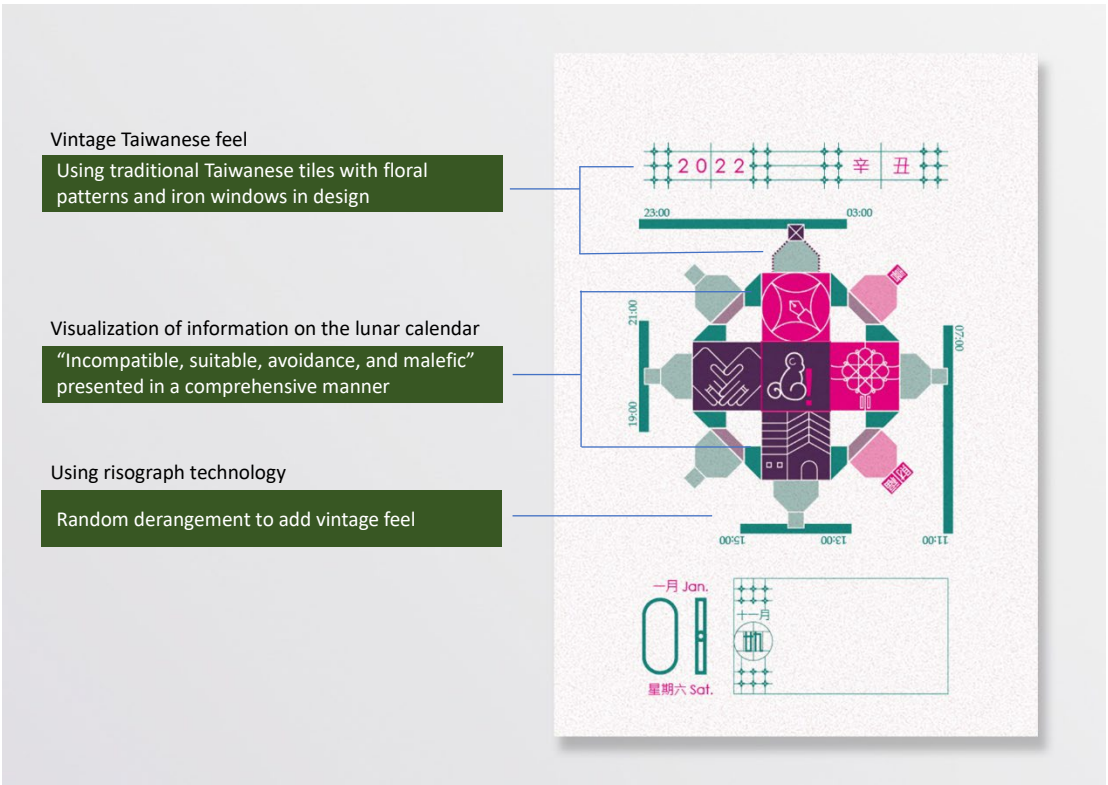

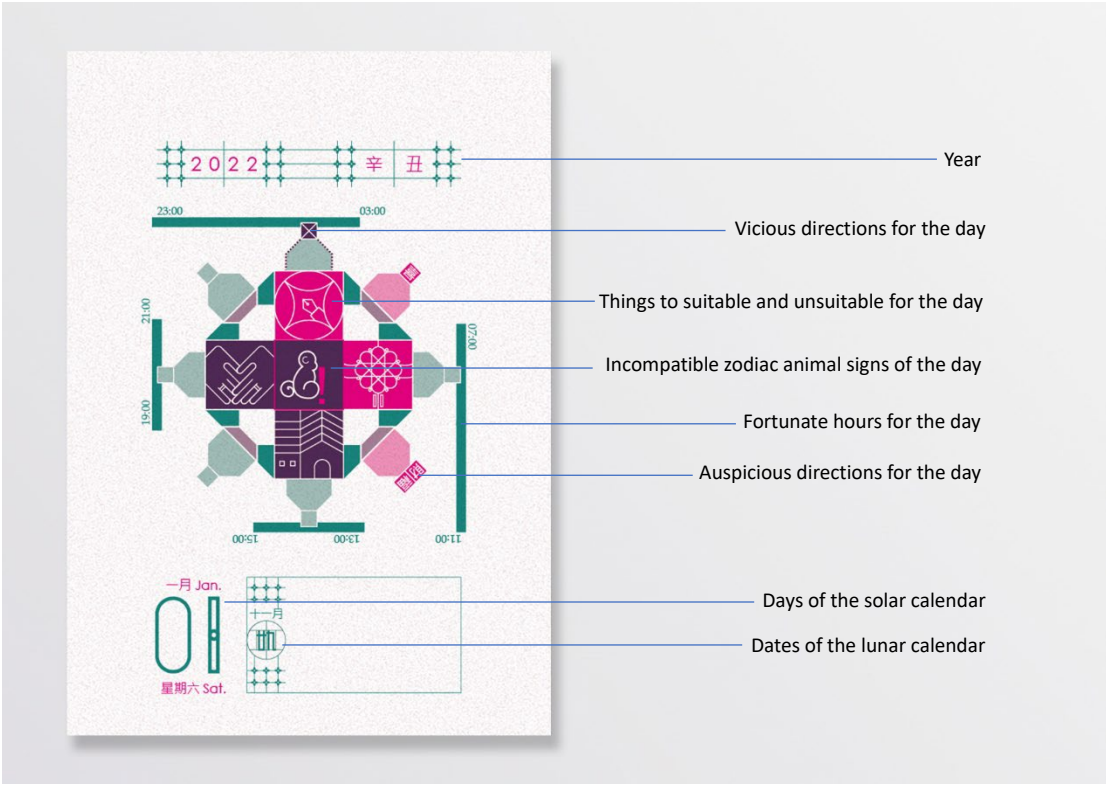

3 Auspicious and fortunate hours

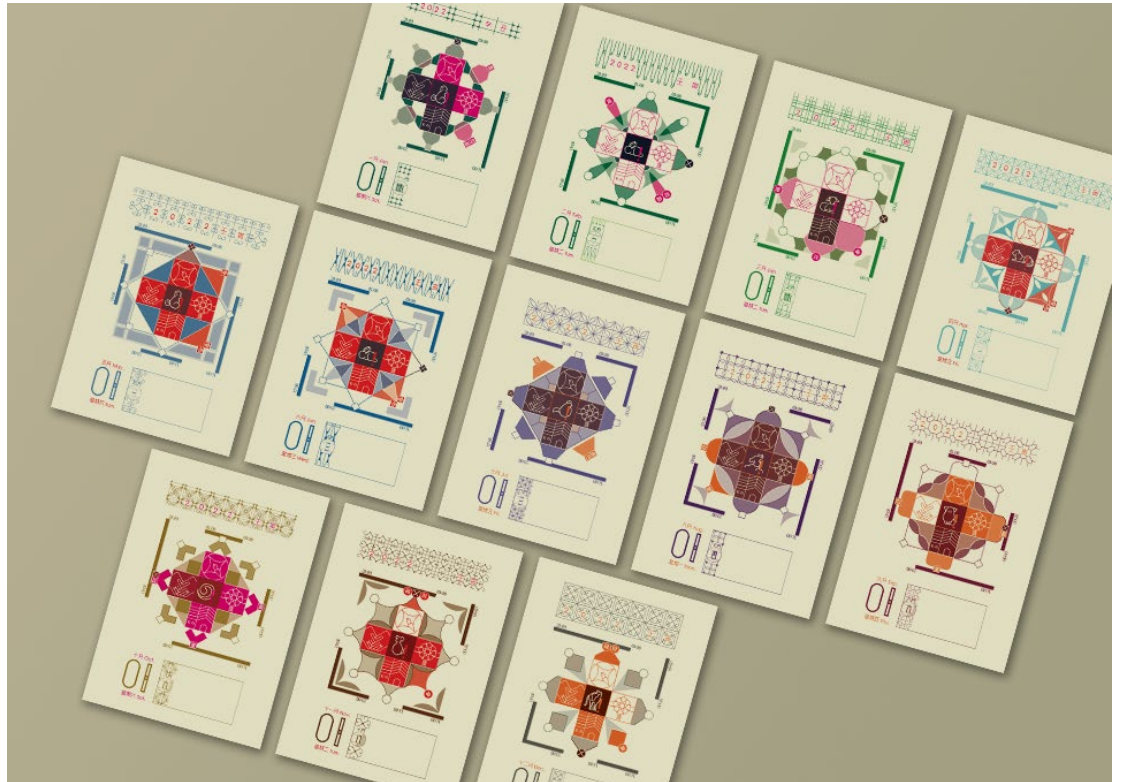

Opening business	Signing contract	Moving	Marriage

Mono color backdrop with white lines (suitable)

Mixed colors backdrop with white lines (unsuitable)

Descriptions of the page

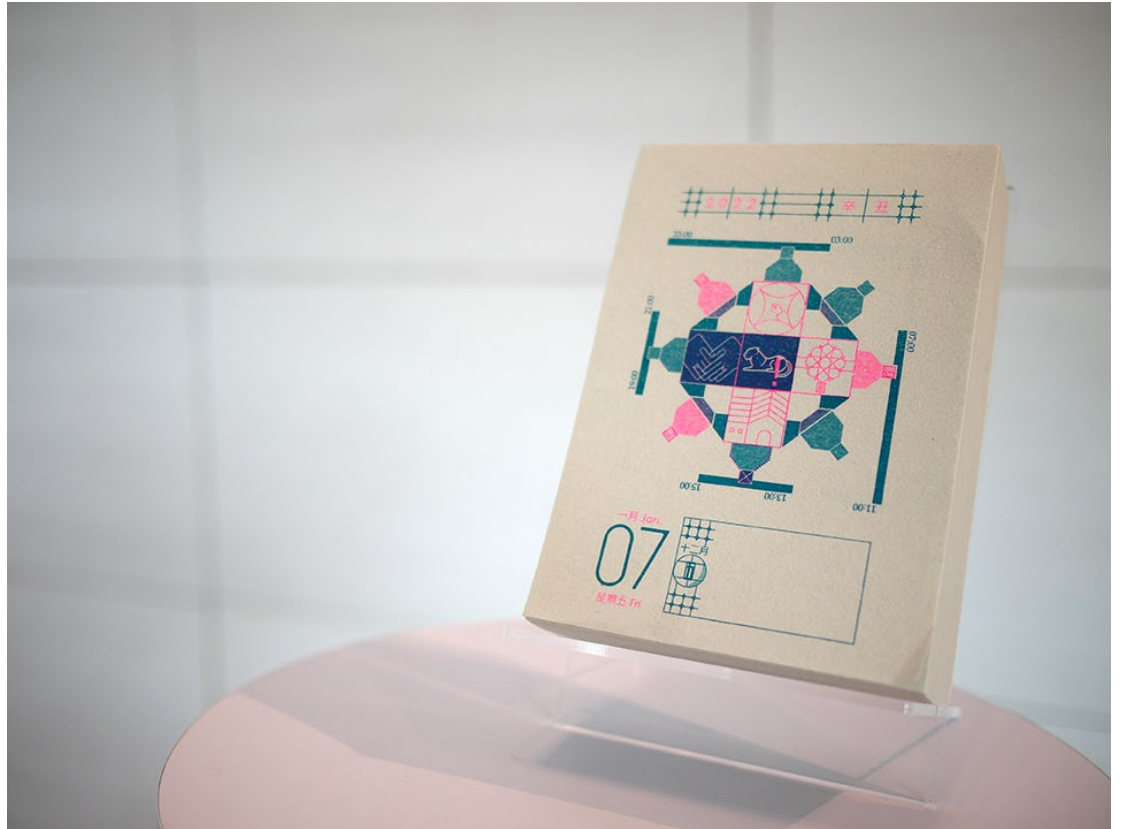

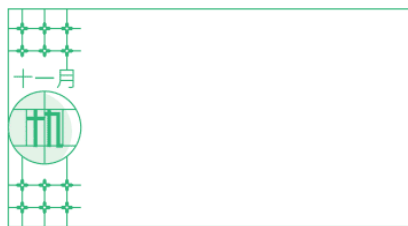

Vintage Taiwanese feel – Using traditional Taiwanese tiles from floral patterns and iron windows in design

Using risograph technology to print with random derangement to add a vintage feel

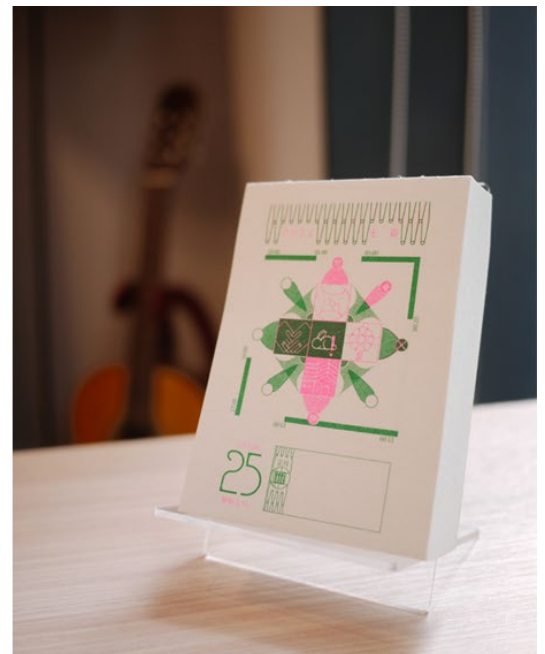

Using straw paper, which coarse surfaces, imported from Japan and risograph technology, it adds a more vintage feel to the printing.

In addition to dates of the solar calendar, the lunar calendar, corresponding to the wax and wane of the moon, are displayed completed.

On the note column and blanks, reminders of today can be written there. Using the corresponding reminder stickers, users can record things to do, time arrangement, thoughts, wish lists, etc. transforming a calendar into a diary.

No punch holes on the calendar. Pages are intact. The calendar is placed on a special rack to present a simple setting.