

DANCING IN CLOUDS Necklace

DANCING IN CLOUDS Necklace is a crane shaped jewelry necklace. The entire crane neck is bent into a slender arc, which reflects the pursuit of line tension in oriental art. The designers outlined the shape of the entire piece with simple lines that contrast with the complex lines of the crane's tail and wings. It's very infectious. The crane's head is connected to the crane's tail, as if the crane is looking back and combing its feathers, it shows the vivid posture of the crane.

Crane is a symbol of the elegance of ancient Chinese celebrities, and it has a high status in Chinese culture. Crane feathers are as white as snow, black as charcoal, red tops are as red as blood, and the colors of ink painting express the noble meaning. The whole work is gorgeous and quiet. It is like a painting of dancing cranes, and the cranes stretch their wings in the sound of chirping.

In terms of craftsmanship: there are many hidden buckles and components behind the collar, which can be split and combined. The tail on the left can be disassembled into a brooch, the wings on the right can be disassembled into a pendant, and the rest of the crane head and crane neck echo each other to form a simple necklace, which can be used for daily wear. Each piece of jewelry after dismantling is meticulously crafted, original and impressive.

- Crane's slender neck is outlined with 893 white diamonds totaling 10.274 carats.
- The black and white wings of the crane are embellished with 381 black diamonds totaling 5.605 carats.
- The clarity of the crane feathers is presented by 12 crystals of ice jadeite with a total weight of 3.655 carats.
- The bright crown of the red-crowned crane is crafted from a 1.38-carat ruby.